

Changes in library policies

Check Out and Renewal Policies

In the past, all books, magazines, audio books and DVDs have been checked out for two weeks, with a seven-day grace period that follows their due date during which no fines accrue. The new policy states that all books, audio books, cake pans and DVDs may be checked out for three weeks. There will not be a grace period. Patrons will continue to receive a text or email reminder after two weeks as well as three days prior to when the material is due.

Magazines may be checked out only for one week. This change was made so more patrons to be able to check out magazines as many are weeklies.

Use of Library

To borrow materials from the library, patrons must obtain a library card. Patrons residing within the following areas will not be charged for a library card:

- Saline County residents
- Rural Crete addresses that reside outside of Saline County

Patrons who do not live within the two areas listed above will be required to purchase an annual non-resident library card for $30.00 per year. Cards may be obtained on an individual basis or as a family.

Blind Dates with Books

by Lupe Lopez Lopez

Love is in the air. Better yet, love is in your library! Dare to try to swipe right to match with a book? If it seems that mystery novels are the only books you pick up from the shelves, a blind date might just be the answer to all your problems. Blind dates can be a nightmare, but occasionally, dreams come true. Too scared to walk up to the shelves for a random match? Do unknown authors or titles scare you off? Are covers all that you focus on? Well, we ask you to take a breather and go on a blind date at your local library. We have a blind date for you...without the pressure!

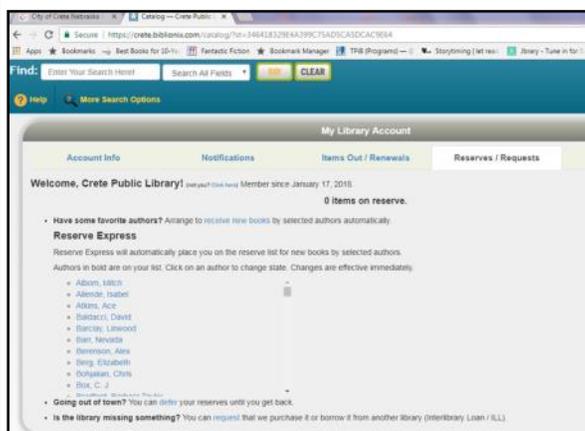

It's a "Blind Date With a Book!" Here's how it works. On the display in the main hall of the library, you will find a selection of brown paper wrapped books. Each book will have a pick-up line; the first line of the book or one sentence to catch your eye. Take a chance and check out the book. Make dinner and start up a small reading session over your favorite meal, or brew up a steamy cup of coffee and discuss plot twists over savory pastries. Show it your favorite spots to read. Maybe you'll want to show it off to your friends too! Then bring THEM into the library for a blind date as well. The possibilities of matches are endless!

If you don't like the book, no harm, no foul. On the other hand, if you fall in love with a new author or a new genre there are many new doors open! Well, actually...there will just be more titles to add to the endless "To Be Read" list. When you unwrap your book, you will find a "Rate Your Date" form. Please take a minute or two to fill this out. And please be honest. You won't hurt our feelings. We know that not all blind dates work! When you return the book, drop your rating form in the designated container for a chance to win a prize.

What about the kids you may ask. How about a "Blind Playdate with a Book?" On the shelves at the west end of the circulation desk you will find a display of chapter books and picture books. They will also have a pick-up line, and/or an age range for that title. Check out and rating of books will be the same as for the adult books. And we know kids; they will definitely be honest in their evaluation! Blind Date With a Book will run through the month of February.

Little House in the Big Woods

Review by Avery Claire Wilsman – 2nd grade

One of my favorite books is Little House in the Big Woods by Laura Ingalls Wilder. I discovered it when my Grandma Jill showed it to me. The Little House on the Prairie books were her favorite when she was a kid. One of the reasons my mom is named Carrie is because there is a baby Carrie in the book. Little House in the Big Woods is the first book in a series by Laura Ingalls Wilder.

The story takes place in the Big Woods a long time ago – like when my Grandma Lucy was my age. Almost 100 years ago. There was a single log cabin and the nearest town was miles away. Mary, Laura, Ma, Pa, and baby Carrie lived there. Pa faces many dangers in the woods when he goes hunting – like finding bears and deer and even sometimes panthers. It's funny to listen to Laura think about how much luckier Mary is than she is.

You should read Little House in the Big Woods yourself if you like books about history, adventures, and families. That's why this is one of my favorite books.

And for the grown-ups who grew up reading the Little House books, the library just acquired another book about Laura Ingalls Wilder - Prairie Fires. It was listed as one of the best books in 2017 by the New York Times.

Prairie Fires: The American Dreams of Laura Ingalls Wilder, by Caroline Fraser

The sesquicentennial observance of the birth of the author of the celebrated Little House books (65 million copies sold in 45 languages) has been the catalyst for the more recent publication of a number of books, now including this magisterial biography, which surely must be called definitive. Somehow, Laura Ingalls Wilder survived incredible childhood travails and grew up to record her experiences in the pages of her Little House books, which—as Fraser documents—are a genial mixture of truth and fiction.

Prairie Fires is a marriage of biography and history—the latter providing such a rich context for the life—that is one of the great strengths of this indispensable book, an unforgettable American story.—Booklist Review
